1. There are war damages in Lepaya which were not there after the first destruction in the [REDACTED]. There are few new buildings, and most ruins have merely been cleared away and squares established instead. For example, the Roga Laukums (Square) in the center of the town is now several times larger than before. Of the famous buildings around the Roga Laukums only the former house of the Latvian Society still stands. It is now the Navy House for the Soviet Navy. It was not until [REDACTED] that the clearing away of the ruins of the former Army Store began, and work is going on there at present.

2. Most streets have different names now. The names are given usually in the Russian language only, but some streets are marked in both Latvian and Russian. Informant recalls that the names of Brivibas iela and Rigas iela have not been changed. The names of the following well-known streets have been changed:

Old Name	New Name
Graudu iela	Karla Marksa iela
Ulicha iela	Uvaras iela
Peldu iela	Komjaunatnes iela
Kurmajas prospekts	Padenju prospekts

3. There are four streetcar lines in Lepaya. These streetcars are marked only with the number, not the destination. Line No. 2 goes to the bridge at the Naval Harbor. Line No. 1 does not follow the former Graudu iela, as before, but now goes along some other street. At night the lines can be distinguished only by their colored lights. Informant recalls that in the case of lines Nos. 1 and 2, both of which leave from Roga Laukums, one has green lights and the other yellow. Informant does not remember which line has which color. The streetcar fare is 30 kopeks. There are only a few taxis in Lepaya.

4. New features in Lepaya are the many snack bars on the street corners. They are called Salat-baru, but are usually referred to simply
